

ABSTRACT

A method and an apparatus for adapting one or more web pages having text, images and/or video content to the characteristics and within the capabilities of the presentation context, delivery context and the content itself. Using a graphical user interface, a graphical designer is able to prepare an image or video by creating metadata profiles describing the characteristics and limitations for the images or video.